ARTHOTIA GAZLIE FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

FRIDAY EVENING, DEC'R. 27.

A NEW WAY OF NET PAYING OLD DEBTS -A good story is told in the last number of Temple Bar of Enizac, the famous Freach author, who, not unlike many other literary celebrities, was often vexed with duns. Unce, when he had gone to bed, one of these upplessent pesonages presented himself, and insisted on seeing his debtor. In vain was he told that M. de Balzac was ill, that he was out, that he was in bed-no refused to budge. At last the servant, in despair, told Bazae who was down stairs, and, to bis great amezement, received orders to show the importunate visitor up. The tradesman, already a latte mollified, is ushered into the sleeping apartment. M. de Bazac eits up courteously in bed, makes his creduor a charming tow, and it quites to what circumstance he may attribute the pressure of his early visit - Flattered by the warmth of his reception, the four-nisseur murmurs something in which the word "money" is alone sudible.—"Money, my dear fellow!" cries the man of letters, with his broad smile, full of bonhommie, 'money do you want? Look in the right hand drawer of the dressing table!" Becoming instantly supple as a glovo, the other runs to the drawer, opens it, examines it, puts his hand to the back—there is nothing. "Ah," says monsieur from the bed, "perhaps the left hand drawer." Same scrutiny, same result. "Or the middle one." Still nothing. "I must trouble you to look under the dressing table." (M. de Baizac is so polite, it is a pleasure to listen to him) The creditor puts his head down-no! In this way the whole furniture of the room is examined, and even the chimner. "Now," says the author, looking sternly upon the crest fallen tradesman, in all tue majesty of a tasseled nightcap, 'if there is no money in the left-hand drawer of the dressing table, nor the right-hand drawer, nor the middle drawer, nor under it, nor under the bed, nor on the wardrobe, nor up the chimney, how do you suppose I am to give you any?" With that he lies down flat upon his back, and the creditor departs anathematizing

The Deleterious Use of Alum in Bread and Baking Powders.

BY HENRY A. MOTT, JR., PH.D., E. M.

Out of the many baking powders I have examined, I have selected the more prominent ones that are adulterated, giving in each case a quantitative analysis of the same. The following analyses are of "Dooley's Standard Baking Powder," "Charm Baking Powder," and the baking powder manufactured by C. E. Andrews & Co., of Milwaukeo. The analysis of the last three baking powders given in the first column was made by Professor Robert W. Schedier. NO. 1-DOOLEY'S STANDARD BAKING POWDER.

wankee, Wisconsin.

On reviewing the above analyses it will be seen that, in the "Patanaco Powder," above 10 per cent of burnt alum is used; over 22 per ct in "Andrew's," over 26 per cent in 'Dooley's," and about 30 per cent in the "Charm."
